Services

Turpin Communication has always recognized the overlap between what is traditionally thought of as presentation skills training and facilitation skills training. After all, presentations involve interactions and discussions that require a facilitator's skill, and group facilitators can only succeed when they are comfortable in their role as presenter and group leader. That's why our workshops focus on a range of skills.

Presentation Skills Workshops

These classes not only help presenters (1) prepare listener-focused, concise presentations and (2) engage their listeners so that delivery is comfortable and effective. They also focus on interactive situations, helping presenters (3) manage the questions and discussions that take place during and after presentations.

Facilitation Skills Workshops

Like presenters, facilitators need to be focused, organized and engaging. They also need to manage groups, keep discussions focused, encourage equal participation from everyone and, when facilitating a training session, set up and debrief exercises. Whatever type of group facilitation our clients work with, our workshops will offer practical feedback in real-life situations.

Outside the Training Room We Also Offer

Self-paced Presentation Skills eLearning courses

Sometimes it's not possible to bring a group together for training. When this is the case, we offer online training blended with private coaching. Presenters go through our online course, upload the presentation they developed during it, then receive private coaching and feedback in a webinar environment.

Executive Coaching

Turpin offers individual executive coaching to help upper-level executives hone their message and improve their presentation skills. These highly-tailored sessions are best used to prepare and practice delivering an upcoming presentation.

Presentation Development Consulting

When you need to get the right message across clearly and consistently, Turpin provides presentation and message development consulting. We bring an objective, practical perspective to a process that can often be overwhelming.
